The final story in Miss Bonner's great trilogy of California romances reveals the steady march of her fine and confident talent.

It is as dramatic as Tomorrow's Tangle. It is bathed in the same warm human emotion that throbbed in the pages of The Pioneer. But, strong and sweeping, large and sure, vivid and compelling, frank and unconventional, Rich Men's Children is better and greater than its predecessors.

The plot, which deals with the conflicts of two generations and the bold passions of the Far West, takes hold instantly with a firm clutch, and the movement is steadily maintained throughout toward a vigorous climax.

The same splendid imagination which reconstructed the Age of the Pharaohs and revivified the glory of Egypt in The Yoke here plays with lambent flame about the great Roman world in the years immediately succeeding the Crucifixion.

The scenes are laid in Jerusalem, Alexandria, Rome and Damascus. The Apostle Paul, the Martyr Stephen, Herod Agrippa and the Emperors Tiberius and Caligula are among the mighty figures that move through the pages.

Wonderful descriptions, heart-stirring incidents, deep emotions, high thought and a love story of the purest and noblest type mark this most remarkable religious romance.

CERTAIN OF A LARGE HOLIDAY SALE

While the compiler of SWEETHEARTS ALWAYS has successfully endeavored to make a comprehensive selection of the best Love Poems, so far as is possible within the limits of a single volume, yet it is to the setting of the poems that the publishers direct particular attention. Each poem is enclosed in a heart-shaped wreath of forget-me-nots printed in two colors. The book is charmingly illustrated with twelve appropriate pictures in color, by H. PUTNAM HALL, and is embellished with many decorations.

At the foot of each page is an appropriate motto or ring posy such as was in olden times engraved in engagement and wedding rings.

SWEETHEARTS ALWAYS is bound in English vellum cloth of assorted colors, stamped in gold and colors in a design of cupids and flowers. Attractively boxed. Price, $2.00.

Edition de Luxe, full morocco leather, decorated. Price, $4.00.

WHEN the author wrote "Princess Maritza" he had but one object in view—to write a story that would entertain. Undoubtedly he has succeeded, for there never was a book that held the reader more fascinated. From the moment when, under a cloud of suspicion, Desmond Ellerey resigns his commission as an English officer and becomes a soldier of fortune, until the dramatic climax, one is caught with irresistible force in the rush and action of the story. The excellently constructed plot, the good vivid writing, the keen interest both romantic and adventurous all help to make it the best story of its type. Thin-blooded indeed must be the person who's attention is not sustained at the boiling point from beginning to end.

Miss Betts is now one of the most successful painters of child life and in her latest work has given us her best effort.

Children never grow tired of the famous nursery rhymes and in the present most attractive form they make an excellent gift book.

With six full-page color plates and six illustrations in black-and-white, and with a border.

INDIAN BOYS and CIRLS

With four full-page illustrations in colors by ALICE MAR. Verses and stories by ALICE CALHOUN HAINES. Decorations and full - page black-andwhite illustrations by EDWIN WILLARD DEMING.

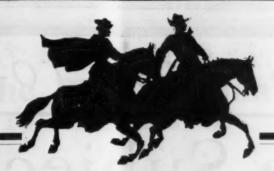

Each of Miss Mar's pictures portrays, with beauty and accuracy of detail, an Indian child in some characteristic occupation.

The aim has been to make the book educational without being unpleasantly "instructive." The pictures are chosen with careful regard for the ideas of children and with the purpose of interesting and entertaining them.

CATTLE-BARON'S DAUGHTER

By HAROLD BINDLOSS

Author of "ALTON OF SOMASCO," etc.

a book that carries one out into the open air

Filled with intense interest by its pictures of the cattle country at that critical period, when the great tracts of land used for grazing were taken up by incoming homesteaders with the result of fierce contest, of passionate emotion on both sides and of the final triumph of the inevitable tendency of the times.

This struggle envelops the interests of the daughter of the most influential cattle baron, and the leader of the new movement. The tale of their devotion fraught with numerous difficulties arouses profound admiration for the plucky girl and deep respect for the man whose stern sense of honor puts to shame the greed and selfishness of the cattle baron.

NOTES IN SEASON.

Dodd, Mead & Co. publish to-day "The Subjection of Isabel Carnaby," by Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler, a sequel to the author's "Concerning Isabel Carnaby," which attained wide popularity because of its irresistible wit and cleverness.

A. C. McClurg & Co. publish this week Randall Parrish's new novel, "Bob Hampton of Placer, Hero of Custer's Famous Fighting Seventh," which has the promise of a tremendously strong popular sale. The first edition of 15,000 was promptly exhausted, and the second and third printings are now under way.

McClure, Phillips & Co. have just ready "The Plow-Woman," by Eleanor Gates, a strong story of pioneer life in the Northwest, by the author of the "Autobiography of a Prairie Girl;" "Tinker Two," by Edgar Jepson, in which the further adventures of young Tinker are described; "The Pets," by Henry Wallace Phillips, in which Red Saunder's bob-cat, his hawk and his snake are partners in a comedy; also, "The Pettison Twins," by Marion Hill, including the stories of Rex and Regina, the "sterilized young-sters."

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. will publish on the 26th inst. a splendid holiday edition of Whittier's "Snow-Bound," illustrated in color and tint by such well-known artists as Howard Pyle, Enneking and Garrett; Mrs. Elizabeth Robins Pennell's eagerly-awaited biography of her uncle, "Charles Godfrey Leland," more familiarly known as Hans Breitmann; "Montlivet," an exciting novel of early days in Michigan, by Mrs. Alice Prescott Smith, author of "The Legatee;" "Harding of St. Timothy's," a preparatory school story for boys, by Arthur Stanwood Pier; Cowper's "Diverting History of John Gilpin," in a quaint little holiday edition, with humorous wcodcuts by Robert Seaver; the Remington edition of "Hiawatha," with over 400 illustrations; "Brothers and Sisters," a book for little children by Miss Abbie Farwell Brown; and new illustrated editions of Whittier's "Child Life" and Scudder's "Boston Town."

The Macmillan Company publish this week Pierre Loti's latest novel, "Disenchanted." The author's position in French literature and the unusual nature of its subject, dealing as it does with the life of the Turkish harem—the London Times calls it "a sequel to Uncle Tom's Cabin"—give to "Disenchantment" an exceptional interest. They have also ready "Listener's Lure," by E. V. Lucas; a profusely illustrated book on "Persia Past and Present," by A. V. Williams Jackson, Professor of Indo-Iranian Languages in Columbia University; volume II. of Dr. Henry Charles Lea's "History of the Inquisition of Spain;" a new edition in one volume of the "Poems of Coventry Patmore," with a portrait and an introduction by Basil Champneys; "A Book of English Gardens," by M. R. Gloag, with illustrations in color by Katharine Montagu Wyatt; a book of essays on "Modern Music and Musicians," by R. M. Streatfield; and a collection of poems about the sea, entitled "A Sailor's Garland," collected and edited with an introduction by John Masefield, author of "On the Spanish Main."

This edition of "Andreas" and "The fates of the Apostles" includes all the material necessary for a thorough study of the two poems. The text is treated conservatively, but the variant readings present a full history of the textual criticism of the works. The introduction discusses the Vercelli manuscript, the sources of the two poems, the poetic handling of the sources, and the history of the apocryphal legends of St. Andrew and the deaths of the Apostles. The question of the authorship of "Andreas" and of the relationship of "Andreas" to "The fates of the Apostles" is fully considered. The editor arrives at the conclusion that the two poems are separate and independent, and that there is insufficient authority for assigning "Andreas" to Cynewulf.

Professor Lovett, of the University of Chicago, has tried to present Browning's poems in the order in which they would naturally appeal to one who has not read them. First are given poems of action and narration; second, poems of places; third, love poems; and fourth, poems of character, including those in which Browning's own temperament and attitude toward life are most clearly expressed. Nearly all the poems are from Browning's early period, 1835 to 1870.

India in the first century of the Christian era is the scene. The hero, Charaka, a man of noble birth, seeking Nirvana, determined to enter a Buddhist monastery. Circumstances prevented him carrying out his designs; he went to battle with his king, fell in love, but could not reconcile it with his conscience to marry until he had had a long conversation with an old Buddhist philosopher, who explained to him the difference between the doctrines of Brahmanism and Buddhism. The latter not exacting self-sacrifice and celibacy as the highest good is specially dwelt upon.

A novel in the form of an autobiography of a middle-class Englishman of fifty years ago. He tells of his parents, his loves and friends, and of his growth from a boyhood of poverty to success in early manhood as an inventing mechanical engineer. The strongest influence in his life is that of the woman he does not marry; and it is for her sake he allows himself to be doubted and misjudged for many years rather than that she should lose faith in her brother.

Eggleston, G: Cary. Blind alleys: a novel of nowadays; il. by E. Pollak. Bost., Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., 1906. c. 3-414 p. front. il. D. cl., $1.50. The principal character is a highly educated young physician, of noble character, who has grown to manhood without knowing his parents or discovering the source of the wealth that has come to him anonymously all through his life. While practicing in New York he is sent for by a rich philanthropic woman to attend her sick poor. From this point his history is slowly evolved. He becomes one of a little band of men and women whose leading thought is how best to help the "well-to-do poor." Their experiences, given in full, are helpful, and seriously and intelligently discussed. The title is explained by the Doctor, who says: "My experience leads me to think that nearly all our efforts to better our fellowmen, whether positively or negatively, lead our fellow-men, whether positively or negatively, lead us into blind alleys."

bds., †$I.

A short allegorical story describing man's subjugation of the animal creation. Two-Legs and his wife appear among the animals, causing amazement and consternation though they seem harmless. At first the pair live on fruit and nuts; then they kill fish for food and finally sheep. The various methods by which Two-Legs domesticates certain animals, provides food and clothing for his family, learns to make a home, and at length proves himself lord of the earth are naively narrated. By the author of "My little boy."

And thither comes Robert Hilton, a New York man of And thither comes Robert Hilton, a New York man of large means given to drink, sent away by his physician to be clear of temptation. The free, simple life of the place, hard work and, above all, the influence of Mary Stingaree, a girl of education and lovely character, called back from her teaching by the claims of a wretched family—all these work a regeneration in the man. The story is told by Jim Turbine, a Bay of Fundy sailor, and introduces quaint and amusing island characters.

Ann Boyd's whole life has been embittered by the persecution of her former rival, Jane Hemingway. Her husband and child deserted her; neighbors and friends, believing the stories about her, gave her the cold shoulder. But for many years she has kept on her selitary way, improving her farm in the up-country of Georgia, accumulating money, a just but pitiless woman to all who have reviled her. Yet when the opportunity comes to have revenge on her enemy her better self asserts itself in saving her enemy's daughter from a terrible mistake and helping her to happiness. And at last Ann comes into her own and is reinstated in public respect.

Hering, H: A. The burglars' club: a romance in twelve chronicles; with 16 il. by F. H. Townsend. N. Y., B. W. Dodge & Co., 1906. c. '05. 6+280 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The Burglars' Club was started by men who had pretty well exhausted the pleasures of life. They were all Englishmen who had been in the army or navy, were all sportsmen and all bachelors, and were all looking for fresh excitement. The entrance fee to the Club was a town burglary, the subject to be set by the president, and every other year each member had to keep up his subscription by some daring attempt in the country. The adventures of the members are the subjects of the twelve chronicles, all full of romance and excitement.

Kramer, Harold Morton. Hearts and the cross; il. by Harold Matthews Brett. Bost., Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., [1906.] c. 6-414 p. front. il. D. cl., †$1.50.

The story of an educated man and one of vigorous personality, who suffers imprisonment for a crime he has not committed, but finally secures justice and pardon. He becomes a wanderer under a false name, winning the better element of a somewhat rough community by his eloquence as the preacher in a neglected parish, meanwhile working in the fields for his support. His fearless honesty and sympathy provoke deadly hatred, augmented by the jealousy of the lover of the heroine, whose interest in the mysterious preacher, so clearly above his present station, adds fuel to the flame. The mystery is at last cleared up and all is well.

Authors are, respectively, heads of the departments of biology in the De Witt Clinton High School and in the Ethical Culture School, New York City. An inductive method has been employed with the definition of a group following as the logical outcome of study of group characters. A large portion of the book is devoted to the insects and vertebrates, because young students are more familiar with these groups and so take greater interest in them. The less known, however, are treated with care, the different features of morphology, physiology and relation to environment being maintained in good measure throughout.

A study of a man and woman, both talented, who after five years of married life find they have drifted apart. The man thinks he has found his intellectual affinity in a soulful young woman who has dabbled in all the fads of the day. His wife, cruelly hurt, gathers her strength to work out a new plan of life for herselt. Her book is a success, while her husband's work shows steady deterioration. Their final readjustment to each other is only reached after humiliation and disillusionment on both sides. Scenes are mostly laid in Lendon.

This Chinese classic "will probably have to be assigned the first place of all publications on the globe. Its editions exceed even those of the Bible and Shakespeare." It is a work of Taoist piety and ethics, "the main idea of the title being expressed in the words Kan, response, and Ying, retribution, which means that in the spiritual realm of heaven there is 'a response' to our sentimerts, finding expression in 'c retribution' of our deeds." (Introduction.) Tai-shang is a current name for Lao Tze, the great Chinese philosopher, born in 604 B.c. founder of Taoism; hence the work resolves itself into an exposition of his doctrines, written by various hands, some portions dating from the 6th century B.C., though in its present shape it may not have existed before the 15th or 16th century.

A sketch of the life of Frederick I., surnamed Barbarossa because of his red beard. He was king of Germany in the 12th century and one of the greatest emperors of the Holy Roman Empire. This little volume includes the events which led up to his accession to the throne of Germany, of his various campaigns in Italy after he had received the imperial crown, and of the disastrous third Crusade, in which he took part with Richard the Lion-hearted of England and Philip Augustus of France.

The Nibelungen lied, one of the world's greatest epics, made its appearance in the twelfth or thirteenth century, in South Germany. Its authorship is unknown. It is a collection of ballads skilfully united so as to form a connected story. Its hero is Siegfried, who possessed the Nibelung hoard; he was treacherously slain by Hagen and the hoard sunk in the Rhine. Wagner used many of these characters and incidents from the German epic in his "Ring der Nibelungen," his material being taken chiefly from the old Norse version.

By the author of "John Charity" and "Brothers."
A group of English and American artists in PontAven, a Breton village, a Breton priest and Téphany Lane, whose father, an English painter of fishermen, had lost his life in a storm off the coast ten years previously, are the people who make the story.
Téphany Lane, after a successful career as an opera singer, returns for a rest to her childhood's home hoping to renew her friendship with Michael Ossory, a great painter and friend of her father. A mystery shadows Michael's life which it takes time to elucidate, involving explanations of Breton customs and superstitions and the waywardness of the artistic temperament.

A picture of harem life in Constantinople, depicting the wretchedness and loneliness of the girls forced to marry men chosen by their families. The three, whose story is here given, belong to noble families, are highly cultured and filled with an intense disgust for the conditions of Oriental women. A Frenchman, first known to them through his books, later becomes involved in their lives. Fuller realization of what life is and what it might be drives one of them to a tragic fate.

Che Publishers' Weekly.

FOUNDED BY F. LEYPOLDT.

SEPTEMBER 22, 1906.

The editor does not hold himself responsible for views expressed in contributed articles or communications.

All matter for advertising pages should reach this office not later than Wednesday noon, to insure insertion in the same week's issue.

Publishers are requested to furnish title page proofs and advance information of books forthcoming, both for entry in the lists and for descriptive mention. An early copy of each best published about the formation of the same page. early copy of each book published should be forwarded, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries ed, as it is of the utmost importance that the entries of books be made as promptly and as perfectly as possible. In many cases booksellers and librarians depend on the Publishers' Weekly solely for their information. The Record of New Publications of the Publishers' Weekly is the material of the "American Catalog," and so forms the basis of trade bibliography in the United States.

"I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which, as men do of course to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and an ornament thereunto."—Lord Bacon.

THE A. P. A.'S ATTITUDE TOWARD UNDERSELLING.

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION was called upon last week to take action against the stores in New York City, Boston and Chicago controlled by the Henry Siegel Company. This action was made necessary because of the cut in the prices of a number of recent copyright novels, which for several days last week were offered in these stores at 98 cents and less. The cut was met only by Macy's, and, after a few days' skirmishing by both houses, was abandoned. Some little excitement was created among the out-oftown retail trade because at its first meeting to consider the matter, held on the 12th inst., action was deferred by the American Publish-Association, and several groundless rumors concerning the actual status of the Association, became current. matter of fact, action was delayed, in the first instance, that the Association might have the benefit of the advice of its counsel, who did not arrive from Europe until the end of the week, and therefore no official action was taken until the 17th, when the Board of Directors at a meeting that was largely representative, decided to take action against the stores in New York and Boston, leaving the Chicago store, in view of possible legal complications, to be dealt with at the discretion of the individual publishers.

There is absolutely no ground for the rumor that abandonment of the reform movement has ever been considered by the American Publishers' Association; on the contrary, the Association is determined to carry on the movement by every legal measure within its reach. That it may be necessary in the future, as it has been necessary in the past, to modify its plan in certain particulars is not unlikely; but these changes will always be in the direction of strengthening the position of the American Publishers' Association rather than in its ultimate dissolution.

The prompt and definite action of the Association in dealing with this matter has called forth from the Booksellers of New York unstinted and unqualified praise, which, no doubt, is but the unexpressed sentiment of the entire retail booktrade. The American Publishers' Association certainly merits the appreciation and support in the fullest measure from all interested in "building up the booktrade on a solid foundation for all time."

In response to our request for information as to omissions or errors discovered in the "Educational List" of 1906, we have received a few corrigenda noted elsewhere. As the errors are scarcely sufficient to justify an errata slip, we suggest that users of the "Educational List" note these corrections on their copies, and though there are doubtless others which have not yet been discovered or called to our notice, we feel that we may safely congratulate the users of the catalogue on the general correctness of the list in its revised shape.

BOOK ADVERTISING.

THE subject of book advertising is one of interest to publishers. perennial enough, while perhaps no other element in the publishing business plays so important a part in the yearly balance-sheet, it is a subject regarding which no fixed or exact laws seem as yet to have been formulated. Every publisher has his own ideas about advertising, and often these ideas undergo radical changes from year to year. It is to be regretted that most of the discussions of book advertising which appear in print from time to time are contributed either by writers outside the trade, who view the subject in its surface aspects only; or by young and inexperienced men who, while in the trade, have still but a limited knowledge of its manifold "ins and outs." Occasionally we are given the results of some veteran publisher's ripened experience—as, for example, Henry Holt's acute and well-founded remarks on the subject, in his Atlantic article on "The Commercialization of Literature," and J. Bertram Lippincott's recent article on "Book Publishing;" but in the main the theorists and the inexperienced, who naturally write and talk most glibly, gain the widest audience. It is as one who has had for years to give the subject of book advertising constant and prayerful consideration, and who has been compelled to study it in the light of practical results, that I venture to contribute some remarks to the discussion, which I hope may lead to an expression of the views of others who have to give thought to this vital subject.

The first point I would set down, and one that clears away at once a large amount of needless confusion, is that there is and can be no hard-and-fast rule about either methods or mediums. In the discussions that I have seen, there has been a wide divergence of opinion—one side urging the value of the socalled literary journals, the other insisting on the superior advantages of newspaper advertising. Both seem to me right, in urging the claims of its kind of mediums; but both are wrong, if they hereby overlook or deny the claims of the other kind. The shrewdest book advertisers, in my opinion, are those who use one class of mediums for one class of books and another for another class-precisely as any manufacturer does. Few of the publishing houses, at least of the important ones, confine themselves to one class of publications; it follows that they cannot sell their books by advertising them exclusively in one kind of medium. A publisher must choose the mediums he will advertise in as he chooses the books he will publish; he brings out a book with a certain constituency in mind, and the best advertising medium for that book is undoubtedly the one that will best help him to reach that constituency. For such advertising as this, the item of circulation alone counts for little—hardly at all. A newspaper of almost unlimited circulation—a hundred thousand or a million, it would make little difference which-might be less valuable, bring him smaller sales, than a thousand or even a hundred copies of a journal going to just the people he wants to reach and must reach if he sells his book.

Some of the discussions I have lately read have urged that in order to sell books one must get at the people who buy books, and get at them in the greatest numbers-which is true; and that the best way to do this is to advertise in daily newspapers—which is not necessarily true. That is, it is not true as a general rule. It is not true of all books; it might be true of some books, and quite untrue of others. I doubt if, on close analysis, it would be found to be true of even a majority of the books published. The class of which it would be most nearly true is obviously fiction. But fiction, as every publisher knows, does not constitute a majority of the books published. And fiction—even the better class of it-is sold largely to the better class of people, the class who read the literary ournals. A highly-seasoned novel, of slight literary merit or none, can be exploited only in the daily press and popular mediums; but the publisher of a new novel by any author of literary standing—Mr. Howells or Mrs. Wharton, or Mrs. Ward, all of whose books sell well and in large numbers—would hardly think of trying to get it before the public without advertising it in the literary journals. It is hardly conceivable that for such a book he would limit his advertising to the daily press; and how much less for other classes of books—the "miscellaneous books" which, more than novels, are the main dependence of the best houses.

A considerable proportion of books are, by their very character, limited in interest to what may be called the literary classes, except for whom they would never have been published; and to be sold they must be advertised in those journals that reach the classes for whom they are intended. Mr. Lippincott, in the article above referred to, says, "Books are the article above referred to, says, advertised in a systematic manner in those mediums which are supposed to be read most widely by people interested in books." These classes of bookbuyers-small in proportion to total population but large in importance to the publisher, including as it does librarians, collectors, and cultivated readers throughout the country-are accustomed to get their information about books from literary journals and not from daily papers. In the lists of "Best Books" issued regularly by the New York State Library, with its recommendation to public libraries, the authorities quoted are almost invariably the literary reviews—The Dial, The Nation, The Athenaum, The Academy—and never the newspapers.

The truth probably is, that average readers of average daily papers do not read books at all, and are a decidedly "negligible quantity" from the standpoint of the practical book ad-It is significant that those daily papers that make the strongest bid for book advertising make all possible effort to give their papers a literary tone—to take on, with more or less pretension, something of the character of the distinctive literary journals which they thus emulate as advertising mediums for books; and those that succeed best in this are those that get the most book advertising-and rightly so, for the more "literary" they make their papers the more they may be supposed to interest the literary classes who buy books. Many such papers are gcod mediums, valuable mediums; they can do much for book publishers in their way, but they cannot render the same service that the established literary journals render in their way. In all civilized countries, book publishing and literary journals flourish together. In England, where book publishing is conducted on a larger and more stable basis than in this country, it is my impression that the purely literary journals obtain about three-fourths of all the current book advertising. Indeed, I doubt if an English publisher could conceive of selling a new book without advertising it in The Athenaum—the foremost literary journal of the country, corresponding to The Dial on this side; he might, and doubtless would, advertise his books elsewhere, but first and always in The Athenœum.

Most of those who take sides in the "literary journal vs. newspaper" controversy seem to lose sight of the fact that these two classes of mediums do not comprise the entire advertising outlet for the publisher. There are established publications such as The Publishers' Weekly that are recognized by the trade as indispensable. It is not at all a question with any publisher as to whether he should confine his advertising to this class of medium or place it in the newspapers. He uses both, probably; but first of all THE PUB-LISHERS' WEEKLY, because that journal reaches a class that he must reach, and cannot reach as effectively in any other way. And it is much the same with this so-called question of literary journal or newspaper—which shall we use? Unhappily, the problem of Unhappily, the problem of book advertising cannot be reduced to such simple proportions. To sell my books I must bring them first of all to the attention of the trade, through the pages of such trade publications as The Publishers' Weekly; then, as they are books, and not bicycles or breakfast foods, I bring them to the attention of the habitual bookbuying class that is reached by the literary journal; and, finally, for the books that are popular in character—which practically means "star" fiction—I reach out for my constituency through the best class of newspapers. A PUBLISHER.

A BOOKSELLER CANDIDATE FOR THE PENNSYLVANIA GOVERN-ORSHIP.

THE HON. EDWIN SYDNEY STUART, ex-Mayor of Philadelphia, etc., but who is familiarly known to the trade and bookbuyers throughout the world as "Leary's," has been nominated for Governor of Pennsylvania by the leaders of the Republican organization of the Keystone State.

The head of "Leary's Old Book Store," on Ninth Street below Market, the son of a Scotch father and an Irish mother, born in Philadelphia on December 23, 1853, often delights in telling of his first visit to Leary's in 1867, which proved to be one of the turning points of his career. We quote the story from the New York Tribune, as printed in its issue for September 16:

It was in response to an advertisement. It was necessary for Stuart to contribute to the meagre resources of the family. The day he set out to secure employment he bought a morning newspaper. Two lines under the heading "Boy Wanted" caught his eye and he hastened to Leary's Old Book Store to offer his services. W. A. Leary, the proprietor,

"So you want a job, do you?" said the old hookseller.

'That's what I'm after," responded the boy. "Well, I've just engaged a boy.

"All right, sir, I'll have to hunt a job somewhere else," replied Stuart with an engaging decisiveness.

The lad started out of the dusky store, his eyes fastened again on the "Help Wanted" column. As he reached the entrance a voice from within cried: "Hold on! Maybe that other boy won't suit. I think I'll try you. I pay $2 a week."

"Then let the first boy have the job," replied the youth, turning in the doorway to look back at the old bookman. "I can't work for $2 a week."

He turned again to go out of the door. "How much will you take?" called out the voice again.

"Three dollars," said young Stuart.

"All right, you're hired," said Leary. "If you want, you can run home and tell your mother."

The boy started for home, but had not gone far before he began to feel uneasy about his position. "What if another should come along and get a trial by the eccentric old book-seller?" he thought. He decided to return and forestall any one else by beginning work immediately, leaving the announcement of his success to his mother until evening. Entering the store, with its shelves of brown-backed old books, he announced that he was ready to go to work.

He swept the store, dusted books and kept his eyes and ears open. His manners were pleasing, and it was not long before he was waiting on customers. He rapidly became acquainted with the details of the business, and in the course of a few years became the buyer, attending book sales in New York and other cities. The visitors to the store, such as Senator Charles Sumner and Governor Pennypacker, then a lawyer, with an office just around the corner, began to look to young Stuart instead of to the old bookseller when they wanted assistance in picking out books. The son of Mr. Leary was taken ill and died. Soon afterward the elder Leary sold out the business to his former errand boy then only twenty-three years old. This was in 1876. Out of it Mr. Stuart has drawn a comfortable fortune. He still maintains his close able fortune. contact with the affairs of the dingy looking old store, with its signs and familiar picture of a bewigged bookworm of a century ago standing on a stepladder in his library, although his brother, William H., is now associated with him.

Besides being an ex-Mayor of Philadel-phia, Mr. Stuart has been twice a presidential elector, the first time casting his vote for James G. Blaine and the second, when he was president of the Electoral College, for Mc-Kinley and Roosevelt. He is also the president of the Union League Club, of Philadelphia.

POST, THE NEW SUPERINTENDENT OF DOCUMENTS.

WILLIAM L. Post, for several months past Acting Superintendent of Documents at the Government Printing Office, Washington, was appointed by Public Printer Stillings, on August 14, Superintendent of Documents, succeeding L. C. Ferrell, resigned. Mr. Post's promotion was not unexpected, and has been fully earned by his long and efficient service in the Office of Documents. He has been connected with that office since its establishment in 1892, when he was assigned to it as file clerk. Later he was transferred to the library, where he was engaged in classification and bibliographic work, and became identified with some of the best indexing and cataloging work done by the office. The admirable index to the publications of the Agricultural Department, 1862-1892, published in 1904, was prepared by Mr. Post, and the ingenious classification and arrangement there adopted were devised by him.

A PUBLISHER'S OBJECTION TO REVISED SPELLING.

We reprint from the New York Times Saturday Review of Books the following very pertinent letter on the complications that might arise if simplified spelling were adopted in printing books, editions of which are also intended for export trade:

"Whatever may be the effect of the President's order in regard to simplified spelling on the documentary history of the country or on the spelling of the daily and weekly press, I am of the opinion that for the book publishers of the literature of the country to adopt the President's new form of spelling would be to jeopardize and even to annihilate that export trade in American literature which we, in common with all of the larger publishers, have been fostering with so much care for a number of years.

"I pointed out some years ago in my pamphlet on 'The Duty on Books' that our exports of books were even then greater than our imports of them from Great Britain, and since then this trade has grown to very considerable proportions.

"To go from the general to the particular, I may point out that my company has within the past few weeks shipped upward of thirty thousand volumes by American authors to foreign countries, included among these being India, South Africa, Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Japan.

"Great Britain to-day, in the best class of books, objects to our usual omission of the 'u' in such words as 'honor,' and to follow the President's list of words in simplified spelling would, in my opinion, kill this export trade, which I and all other publishers are so desirous of building up.

"The time will come when the United States will take the lead in literature, as it is bound to do in ordinary matters of commerce, given wise administration of the laws; and to aid in giving a setback to this movement, such as the President's order must give to it if it is carried out, is a step in the wrong direction.

"I notice several eminent publishers among the advocates of the simplified spelling as ordered by the President, but I have yet to learn that any of these gentlemen who allow their names to be printed as advocates of the movement use it in their printed books."

GEORGE P. BRETT,
President of The Macmillan Company.

SWEDEN OPPOSES COPYRIGHT TREATY.

THE invitation tendered by the United States to Sweden to conclude a copyright treaty, according to cable reports, is meeting with heated opposition. The government has referred the American proposals to the Publicist Club, of Stockholm, and a lively debate on the subject, on the 15th inst., showed that a majority of the members were against the treaty. The sale of books to the United States is a valuable source of income to Swedish publishers, and it was contended that the treaty would kill this business.

AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION.

THE AMERICAN PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION on the 17th inst. took action against the Henry Siegel Company's stores in New York and Boston, leaving action against the Chicago stores to the discretion of its several members.

The suit of Owen Mines against the Association has been abandoned and Mr. Mines has been reinstated.

THE BOOKSELLERS OF NEW YORK.

A REGULAR meeting of the Booksellers of New York was held on the evening of September 18 at Brentano's, Union Square, New York City. In the absence of the president, Simon Brentano, F. E. Grant presided, and Charles E. Butler acted as secretary in the absence of Mr. Gorham. There were present F. E. Grant, Charles S. Pratt, A. Mackel, of Ammon & Mackel; Henry Malkan, Charles A. Burkhardt, of E. P. Dutton & Co.; F. D. Lacy, of G. P. Putnam's Sons; R. E. Sherwood, Arthur Brentano, Charles E. Butler and A. Gugenheim, of Brentano's, and the representatives of other houses.

Considerable interest was displayed by the members present in topics of vital interest and much discussion took place. The question uppermost in the minds of the members during the evening was the course taken this week by the A. P. A. to suppress underselling, the feeling prevailing that the American Publishers' Association deserved the heartiest support of the entire retail booktrade. The following resolution was read and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The members of the American Publishers' Association, since that organization was called into life, have to the very utmost and so far

Resolved, By the Booksellers of New York, assembled in special meeting this 18th day of September, 1906, that the retail booktrade of New York City express their hearty appreciation of the action of the American Publishers' Association and of all their efforts to protect and build up the booktrade on a solid foundation for all time, and be it further Resolved, That the Bcoksellers of New York pledge themselves to hold up the hands of the publishers in their efforts to restore the booktrade and call upon their colleagues throughout the country to join them in a hearty and unselfish support of the efforts made on their behalf.

The evening generally was taken up by informal talk and discussion of conditions and ways and means to improve them.

OBITUARY NOTES.

ARTHUR DUDLEY VINTON, author of "The Pomfret Mystery, "The Unpardonable Sin" and "Looking Further Backward," died in Brooklyn, N. Y., September 13. Mr. Vinton was born in Brooklyn, December 23, 1852, and after graduating from the Columbia Law School devoted himself to the practice of law. He was also for a time managing editor of the North American Review.

DANIEL McIntyre Henderson, who for a number of years kept the University Bookstore, at Howard and Madison Streets, in Baltimore, Md., and was a recognized poet and scholar, died on September 15 at the Maryland General Hospital of typhoid fever. He had been ailing all the summer, but remained at his book store until two weeks ago, when he took to his bed. He grew worse rapidly, and last Thursday was removed from his home, 1317 Linden Avenue, hospital. Mr. Henderson was a Scotchman, hospital. He Clasgow July 12, 1851. He was educated in that city, and went to Baltimore in 1873, obtaining employment in a bookstore. In 1891 he went into the book business on his own account. The most probusiness on his own account. The most pro-nounced characteristic of Mr. Henderson was his modesty. Had he been more inclined to push himself, he would probably have turned his writings to greater profit. In fact, it was a long time before people in his own city recognized his literary ability, and many of his poems had their first reading before the members of the St. Andrew's Society, of which he had been a member for years and of which he was president at the time of his death. Among his admirers were Robert Louis Stevenson, Edmund Clarence Stedman, James Russell Lowell and James Whitcomb Riley. During a visit to Baltimore upon one occasion Mr. During a Riley went into Mr. Henderson's store, and in looking over the books on the shelves picked up a copy of Scottish poems with the name "D. M. Henderson" on the flyleaf. He became interested in the verse and finally asked "Who is this man Henderson?" The proprietor of the bookstore admitted with a blush that he was the man, and from that day on James Whitcomb Riley was one of his greatest friends and admirers. Mr. Henderson's first work, "Poems-Scottish and American," was published in 1888. He continued to write verse and magazine articles, and in 1905 he issued "A Bit Bookie of Verse." Many of his poems were in the Scotch dialect and breathed of the Scotch life and traditions. Few men in Baltimore will be more missed by bookish people than Mr. Henderson. He was a great student and liked to stay around his store, where he was often consulted by persons looking for something to

JOURNALISTIC NOTES.

The North American Review, it appears, was not started and published for sixty years as a quarterly, as noted by us in our issue for September 15. As a matter of fact, the Review began in 1815 as a bi-monthly, and, until the end of 1818, published six numbers a year.

The Chautauquan Weekly has been started to present each week views of the institution, of its home town, Chautauqua, N. Y., and of its home territory, Chautauqua Lake, all the year round. The first issue is dated August 30. With the September issue

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

UPTON SINCLAIR'S Packingtown novel, "The Jungle," has just passed the hundred thousand mark.

THE C. M. CLARK PUBLISHING COMPANY have in preparation a strong story of heredity, entitled "This Was a Man!" by Hattie Horner Louthan, who bases her story on the belief that "blood will tell."

EVERITT & FRANCIS COMPANY, No. 9 East Twenty-second Street, New York City, will publish on October 1 an exhaustive work on "The Art of the Old English Potter," by L. M. Solon, with illustrations by the author.

McLoughlin Brothers have brought out this month in the Young Folks' Colonial Library "The Story of Anthony Wayne (Mad Anthony), the hero of Stony Point," by Percy K. Fitzhugh, with illustrations by Noble Ives.

Brentano's will publish shortly a volume entitled "Some Beauties of the Seventeenth Century," by Allan Fea, a series of memoirs of some of the memorable women of that period, illustrated with a number of hitherto unpublished portraits by Lely, Kneller, Cooper and other prominent seventeenth century artists.

THE J. B. LIPPINCOTT COMPANY have published this week Rosa N. Carey's annual story for girls, "No Friend Like a Sister." They have also just issued an important volume by John J. Black, M.D., entitled "Eating to Live," which is described as a "book for everybody," with special advice to the gouty, the rheumatic and the diabetic.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. are adding several important titles to their popular Thin Paper Classics—a series which comprises some of the largest books in the most compact compass. Among the prose titles will be Boswell's Johnson, Carlyle's French Revolution and Don Quixote. Among the poets will be Burns, Keats, Scott and Shelley in complete editions.

THE DENTAL PUB. Co., 44 Court Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., has published a useful book on "The Teeth and Their Care," by Dr. Thaddeus P. Hyatt, lecturer in the public schools of New York City, which is so good that it has also met with a very cordial reception from the dental profession. The information is based on long experience and is put in such simple language that even a child can understand it.

John Murphy Company. Baltimore, Md., have just published a collection of verses entitled "Youthful Fancies," by Annie Wilson McCoy, one of Maryland's sweet singers. As the Baltimore Sun, certainly a discriminating critic, says, Miss McCoy's volume, like Henderson's "A Bit Bookie of Verses," "will live for its purity and sweetness, its touching sentiments and its graceful expression." The volume is illustrated and tastefully gotten up.

MOFFAT, YARD & Co. have in press a juvenile entitled "Our Army for Our Boys," by Tudor Jenks, a history of the United States army from its earliest beginnings, explaining its purposes, its results and its development, in a manner adapted to the instruction and entertainment of the young. There will be a large number of illustrations, many of them printed in colors, by H. O. Ogden, the artist who painted the series of pictures of the American army for the official records of the War Department.

Forbes & Company, Chicago, announce that the publication of "The Making of a Merchant," by Harlow N. Higinbotham, has been delayed until October 10. The advance interest in the book demands a large first edition. This book, by a partner of the late Marshall Field, a successful merchant and financier, deals with business methods from the point of view of a practical man of business and sets forth the principles which have made a great firm world famous. Every man, whether in business for himself or others, will find the practical suggestions most helpful.

G. P. Putnam's Sons will publish on the 25th inst. "George Herbert and His Times," by A. G. Hyde, which is based upon all available sources of information concerning the life of this fine old seventeenth-century churchman and poet, and will likely make any future "life" a work of supererogation; also, "Mary Barton," the first volume of what is certain to be the definitive edition of the works of Mrs. Gaskell, edited, as the succeeding volumes will be, by Dr. Adolphus W. Ward, Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge, who has had valuable assistance from Mrs. Gaskell's two daughters.

JAMES POTT & Co. will publish shortly "The Pageant of London," by Richard Davey, with forty original colored illustrations by John Fulleylove; "Algiers," by M. Elizabeth Crouse; "The Cathedrals of England and Wales," by T. Francis Bumpus, in three volumes; "The Cathedrals and Churches of the Rhine and North Germany," also by Mr. Bumpus; "India," by Pierre Loti; "Some Literary Eccentrics," by John Fyvie, author of "Women of Wit and Beauty;" "By the Waters of Carthage," by Norma Lorimer; "Fire and Sword in the Caucasus," by Luigi Villari; and a new book by Charles Battell Loomis, entitled "Cheer Up."

Frederick A. Stokes Company have just ready "The Cattle Baron's Daughter," by Harold Bindloss, author of "Alton of Somasco," etc., describing life in the cattle country at the time when the great tracts of land used for grazing were taken up by incoming homesteaders with the result of fierce contest. They also call attention to two new juveniles—"Indian Boys and Girls," with four fullpage illustrations in colors, by Alice Mar, appropriate verses and stories by Alice Calhoun Haines and decorations and black-andwhite illustrations by Edwin Willard Deming; also, "Favorite Nursery Rhymes," by Ethel Franklin Betts, with six color plates and six illustrations in black and white.

THE ARTHUR H. CLARK Co., Cleveland, O., will publish this fall, in two large volumes, a "Documentary History of Reconstruction, Political, Military, Social, Educational and Industrial," the documents having been selected and edited by Professor Walter L. Fleming; a limited edition of Morgan's "History of the Philippine Islands," in two volumes; also, Farnham's "Travels in Great Western Prairies," De Smet's "Oregon Missions," and Palmer's "Travels Over the Rockies," all edited by Dr. Reuben G. Thwaites. In "the Philippine Islands" series will appear volumes 42, 43, 44 and 45, edited by Blair and Robertson, and the series of "Early Western Travels, 1748-1846," will be completed by an "Analytical Index," forming volume 31.

Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co. have just ready Margaret Sidney's long-delayed new book, "Two Little Friends in Norway," which appears in the new Two Little Friends Series. The heavy advance orders seem to indicate that this series will rival the author's famous "Pepper Books" in popularity. Lillian Gertrude Dreyfus, daughter of Boston's merchant prince, A. Shuman, who, under her maiden name, gained much praise for her first volume of poems, "From Me to You," published some years since, has completed a second volume of verse, which will be published November first, in very attractive form under the title of "In Praise of Leaves." The writings of "Petroleum V. Nasby" (David R. Locke) are still in demand, and a new edition of "Morals of Abou Ben Adhem" will shortly be brought out in response to frequent orders.

B. W. Dodge & Co., New York City, will publish next month a comic "Who's Who," entitled "Who's It in America, being a sort o'biography of certain prominent persons with some facts about them, hitherto unpublished in any other dictionary of biography, edited and compiled from the latest unavailable data," by Charles Eustice Merriman, author of "Letters of a Son to His Self-Made Father," etc.; "Patricia at the Inn," a historical romance of Charles II. at the time of his flight from England to France, by J. C. Snaith, author of "Broke of Covendon," etc.; "J. P. Dunbar," by William Cadwalader Hudson, ("Barclay North,") a story of stock manipulations in Wall Street; also, "Don Miguel Lehumada, discoverer of liquid from the sun's rays," by Sue Greenleaf, a story that will interest theosophists, occultists and kindred spirits who like startling new ideas and mysticism.

HENRY HOLT & Co. will publish shortly "Casa Grande," a romantic and picturesque story of the squatter days on a California ranch in the early fifties, by Charles Duff Stuart, of San Francisco; also, "Affairs of State," by Burton E. Stevenson, author of "The Helladay Case," etc., which gives a decidedly vivid and lively account of some international complications at a Dutch watering place. They also announce a work entitled "Panama and the Panama Canal," which is believed to be the first complete history of the four centuries of canal agitation and attempts at creation available in any language. Dr. Willis Fletcher Johnson, the author, since De Lesseps' time has been a close student of, and frequent writer on, Isthmian Canal affairs, especially in the New York Tribune and London Times. He has been on the spot with Secretary Taft, to whom by permission the book is dedicated.

The author is already well known by his "Century of Expansion."

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have just ready volumes I and 2 of the "Harvard Psychological Studies," edited by Hugo Münsterberg, the firm having taken over the publication of these studies, comprising the experimental work of the Psychological Laboratory of the university of which Hugo Münsterberg is the director and whose assistants are Professor E. B. Holt and Dr. R. M. Yerkes. They have also just ready "Studies in Philosophy and Psychology," by former students of Charles E. Garman, which were presented to him on June 20, 1906, in commemoration of his twenty-five years of service as teacher of philosophy in Amherst College, and are now issued in book form; Part XII. of "A Hebrew and English Lexicon of the Old Testament Based on Gesenius," edited by Drs. Francis Brown, S. A. Driver and Charles A. Briggs; also, volume 5 of "The Proceedings of the International Congress of Arts and Science at St. Louis in 1904," containing biology and psychology.

Duffield & Co. will bring out on the 26th inst. "Marcel Levignet," by Elwyn Barron, a story of modern Paris, with a strong detective interest. They are issuing a new edition, with considerable new material, of "The Compromises of Life," by Colonel Henry Watterson. One of the new papers is "Go South, Young Man," which since its original delivery as a speech has become a watchword with people on the Southern side of Mason and Dixon's line. They have included in their catalogue "Some Truths and Wisdom of Christian Science," by Margaret Beecher, a granddaughter of the famous preacher, Henry Ward Beecher. The same firm have annexed "The King's Lyrics" and "The Queen's Garland," selections of Elizabethan lyrics, edited by Fitz Roy Carrington. These quaint little books, originally published by R. H. Russell, will be reissued by Duffield & Company uniform with Mr. Carrington's new book, a collection of religious and devotional verse, to be called "The Pilgrim's Staff."

HARPER & BROTHERS HAVE week "Sidelights on Astronomy," by the Simon Newcomb, which has to do with the larger aspects of astronomy rather than with its minute technical details, and is designed to put before the lay reader the nature of the big problems which excite the curiosity of the ordinary man as much as that of the scientist, and, in a general way, to describe the methods now employed by astronomers in working toward their solution. They will publish at once "The Gentleman Ragman," a humorous novel by Wilbur Nesbit, author of "The Trail to Boyland." to Boyland." His new book, Mr. Nesbit's first venture into fiction, tells its story from a boy's standpoint, and has to do with exciting and amusing local affairs in a typical inland village. The Harpers are augmenting their Young People Series by the addition of Livingston B. Morse's "The Road to Nowhere," previously published by them only in a more expensive edition. The story is of the "Alice in Wonderland" type—humorous and full of quaint conceits. The illustrations of the original volume will be retained in the cheaper reprint.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. will publish on the 27th inst. an important work on "Inventors at Work," by George Iles, author of "Flame, Electricity and the Camera," which was so comprehensive that it has been introduced as text-book in many colleges and schools. His new book aims to bring all the achievements of modern invention as closely up to date as possible. It pictures great inventors in their workshops and laboratories. Bessemer tells in his own words the story of his steel process. Bell recites how he transmitted speech along a beam of light. The production of dynamite by Nobel, of the incandescent gas mantle by von Welsbach are recounted, as well as the supreme discoveries of all timethe discovery of gravitation by Newton, of magneto-electricity by Faraday. Throughout magneto-electricity by Faraday. Throughout the book principles are brought into relief: first, those underlying Form as conferring strength, ensuring efficiency of tools and ma-chines, minimizing the resistances of ships. Properties next have attention, as fitting one substance for food, another for raiment, a third for shelter. Measurement is next taken up, and its new instruments of astonishing refinement are described. Among the very important problems that are exhaustively dealt with are light production and the utilization of electricity. They will also publish on the of electricity. same day "Crumbs and His Times," by Dolores Bacon, the story of Mrs. Bacon's little child, which is said to be one of the most intimate glimpses into the development of child life that has been published in some time; "Set in Authority," by Mrs. Everard Cotes, a novel of English life in India and particularly of the social set which dominates the English colonial policy in so many parts of the world; "The Arab Horse," by Spencer Borden, whose wide experience with this breed of horses enables him to speak with authority, with a preface by Professor Henry Fairchild Osborne, of the American Museum of Natural History; a work on "Farm Animals," by E. V. Wilcox; "Confessions to a Heathen Idol," by Marion Lee; "The Cynic's Word Book," by Ambrose Bierce; also, "They," by Rudyard Kipling, all of which have already been more or less fully described by us October a has been fixed as October 2 has been fixed as scribed by us. the date of publication of Rudyard Kipling's new book, "Puck of Pook's Hill;" and next menth will also appear Anthony Fiala's "Fighting the Polar Ice," which will be elaborately illustrated. With the second edition which is shortly to be brought out the title of "Recollections and Letters of George Washington" will be changed to "Washington as a Country Gentleman."

Under the heading "Books Wanted," book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines, exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small undisplayed advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their Communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

LAT In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

LAT Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors. It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

BUSINESS DOUBLED

Many booksellers have stocked up liberally with the DODGE publications this The steady increase in popularity, the fact that every book will bring the full list price, and the demand for unique books for the holiday trade, are a few of the reasons for the doubling of this year's sales.

If you are not one of the many book buyers making the Dodge productions the central attraction during the Fall and Holiday season send for a copy of "Good Things for Booklovers." It's well worth having.

ITTLE BOOKS ON ART. This series forms an exquisitely artistic little library of art. Daintily bound, artistically printed and copiously illustrated, they are practically indispensable to the art lover. Four new titles are now ready-"Raphael," "Greek Art," "Van Dyke," "Millett." Cloth, $1.50.

UMPTY DUMPTY AND OTHER SONGS. By Joseph Moorat. A very beautiful child's book, containing many of the old favorite nursery rhymes set to music, with illustrations by Paul Woodroffe. Among the compositions are: The King of France, Hush-a-Bye Baby, Rub a Dub Dub, Humpty Dumpty, Bye Baby Bunting, There Was a Crooked Man, Three Little Mice, etc., etc. Boards, $1.25.

REAT IDEALS. Five new titles are now ready-Duty, An Ideal, Crossing the Bar, The Psalm of Life, Day by Day. Dainty bindings in leatherette padded, 35 cents; English leather, 75 cents. (Ready.)

HAND COLORED BOOKS. "Rimes of the Ancient Mariner," "Legend of Sleepy Hollow" and Browning's "Saul." Hand colored initial letters, Japan inserts, original ornaments. Bound in full morocco, $2.00.

Edmund Vance Cooke's first book for children is going to make a decided hit everywhere. Bound uniform with his volume of poems about children, "Chronicles of the Little Tot," and containing thirtynine illustrations by Bessie Collins Pease, nine in full color. There is probably no one in the world better fitted to tell stories to children than Mr. Cooke. His recent poems about children show a wonderful insight and a thorough knowledge of child-life and character, and in a very short time Mr. Cooke's poems have obtained a wide and cordial reception. Cloth, $1.50.

THE BIOGRAPHY OF OUR BABY. Verses by Edmund Vance Cooke and drawings by Bessie Collins Pease. An entirely new baby record book. New colored plates by a popular artist; verses by the author of "Chronicles of the Little Tot" and paper made to be written on with pen and ink. These are a few of the points that go to make this the best book on the market at the price. Cloth, $1.50; silk, padded, $3.00; ooze leather, $4.00.

THE DODGE LEAFLETS.

A series of inspiring gems of thought by some of the greatest writers. Printed in large, clear type, with decorative initial letters in colors on a fine pasted antique bristol board. 64 titles, 5 cents each.

A new wall card by Max Ehrmann. Printed in red and black on Japanese wood and mounted on a heavy beveled card. 50 cents. Also made in large size at $1.00.

Also a most artistic line of imported Christmas cards, special novelties in calendar pads, Holly cards, passe-partout mottoes, postal card frames, pictures, art calendars, etc., etc. Send for catalog to-day.

SOME REVIEWS

"Dr. Hyatt's Book is an excellent condensation of facts, regarding the care of the teeth, which should be available to parents whose knowledge of oral hygiene is of such importance, to the health of children through their life. An especially useful characteristic of this little volume is the clear presentation in its pages of the relation between soundness of the teeth and the general health of the body. The Book will be of benefit in the hands of every reader."—The Daily Standard Union, Brooklyn.

"Popular yet scientific—a monograph of elementary principles and facts regarding the teeth and their intimate relation with the structure of the whole body."—The Public, Chicago.

"In this dainty cloth-bound book Dr. Hyatt has given some of the most important directions regarding the care of the teeth,"—Suggestion.

This little book is attractively bound in blue linen covers, printed on good paper, and particular attention has been given to the illustrations, which are clear and easily understood.

No Friend Like a Sister

A new story by Rosa N. Carey is always welcome. She is to-day, by all odds, the most popular writer for young women and for girls who have outgrown their fondness for purely juvenile reading.

always wholesome, and, besides their pure views of life, they are written in a highly interesting and entertaining manner.

Miss Carey's latest novel, as its title indicates, is intended for young women, and from first page to last is a spirited story, marked by that heart interest which is the strongest appeal to every reader.
